The Official Stenagraphers Unable to Report H.m. Senator Morean Intimates that if the Trenty Patis the President will Enforce the Relativition Act - Five More Private Pression Bills Vetoes.

WASHINGTON, Aug 9 .- The Senate stenographers are having a difficult task attempting o report Mr. Evarts's long and dry speech on the Fisheries Treaty. The Senator spoke for nearly three hours resterday, and to-day he had been speaking nearly four hours when he gave way, saying that he would possibly resume the floor to-morrow upon the conclusion of the remarks which Senator Morgan desired to make. The stenographers have succeeded in getting only very unsatisfactory notes, and they will have to be revised thoroughly by the Senator before being printed. For the first time in the history of the United States Senate the official stenographer was compelled today to occupy the desk of a Senator in taking notes, it being utterly impossible to correctly catch the words of the New York Senator from the reporters' regular place in front of the Vice-President's desk, although the speaker stood at the desk of Senator Dawes, but a few feet away. In the House the official stenographers dash about everywhere, taking advantage of any situation offered to get within hearing of the speakers. In the Senate, however, no such free and easy actions. are allowed and the reporters invariably sit at their own tables when taking notes. They could not do it during Mr. Evarts's speech. however. His utterance is so indistinct and his habit of allowing his voice to drop at the end of each sentence until it is culte inaudible so constant, as to greatly annoy and embarrass the stenographers in their work. They made a determined effort to get a correct report today, but did not succeed.

Mr. Evarts had one auditor who was completely carried away with the great speech. This was a young colored man, who is an employee of the Committee on Library, of which Mr. Evarts is Chairman. When the speech was about half finished this young man, who loves to use high-sounding phrases, called at the plopee of the Committee on Library, or when Mr. Evarts is Chairman. When the speech was about half finished this young man, who loves to use high-sounding phrases, called at the press gallery and assured the correspondents that the speech was an imperial one, the one great event of the present long accasion, and that he noped it would be described as the great imperial speech of the day.

Senator Morgan, it is understood, has not made his real speech on the question of the treaty yet. He space five hours in executive session, and has several times since addressed the isonate, occupying several hours on one occasion. He says, however, that he has not yet prepared his formal speech on the question of the ratification of the treaty.

Before the Senate closed to-day Senator Frye served notice on the Democrats that if they thought they could succeed in successfully fillustering against a vote on the treaty they would find themselves badly mistaken. He would not put on the Serews to-day because the weather was too hot, he said, but it would be cooler soon, and then the test of strength and endurance would come. Inquiry among the Democratic Senators develops the fact that Senator Morgan cannot rely upon them all, or even a majority, to sustain him in his fillusering states. They do not think it would be bester satisfied to have the President withdraw the treaty. Senator Morgan claims to be indiginant at the course pursued by the Republicans in this matter, and will make a determined effort to whip his colleagues into acquiescence with his fillustering programme. Senator Evarts devoted a great field of his argument to-day to the question of bays and headlands, contending that the waters over which Capada claims exclusive jurisdiction are really the high seas, as much so as Ballin's flay, Hudson's Bay, or the Bay of Fundy, and that what is known as the three-mile line is merely all interdictions for the programment was to insist that the United States, and the or the part of Gerearce, a linead crespect, a right to a sch

the extract in question, which reads:

On the 19th of January, 1987, Congress came to the conclusion that the peried of negation and unavailing remonstrance had passed:

So that it was Congress itself, Mr. Evarts said, and not the committee, which had come to that conclusion. As to the same Senator's charge of servilley against the committee, Mr. Evaris fulfed to lind anything offensive or serville in the paragraph referred 10. In conclusion he said that he would prepare a comment upon the terms of the treaty itself (and he hoped not an unfair one); but he would forbear to proceed with it at present. The pending question was the resolution for postponement ill December next, and a critical examination of the articles of the treaty would more properly find its place when that resolution was disposed of and when the treaty itself was before the Senate for action.

After Mr. Evarts had ceased speaking the discussion turned on President Grant's message to the Senate with a proposed treaty on the same subject. Mr. Morgan declared that President Grant had on that occasion given counsel in laver of a true and wises policy, and now spoke from his grave better than any Senator had done in this discussion. He said that the object of destroying the treaty at once was nothing more nor less than political, and was connected with the Presidential election. Neither the Committee on Foreign Relations nor the Senator from New York had proposed anything in the place of it. They posposed anything in the place, of it. They posposed anything in the place of it. They p bollsh, or too unparticitie to exist properly sheler the protection of American laws.

Mr. Hals criticised Mr. Morgan's position and that of the Democratic party on the treaty as being in the interest of free trade. The trenty was a proposition to remove the duties on fish caught by British fishermen to be brought into American ports in competition with American interests and industries.

After some further interchange of personalities between Mr. Blair and Mr. Morgan the day's discussion ended, and the Senate adjourned.

Senator Ingalis, the presiding officer of the Senate, used his official power to-day in a way seldom, if ever, before witnessed in the United seidom, if ever, before witnessed in the United States Senate. As presiding officer Ingalis is a martinet. Discribine is all important with him, and he rigidly enforces the rules of the Senate. He took rather a new and unexpected form to day and made Senator tewart of Nevada, and alterward Senator Jones of Arkansas, the victims of his power. The Senate was proceeding under the five-minute rule, and that allows a Senator to steak ones only Senator Stewart loves to make speeches, and since he has been a Senator for the second time he has rarely missed an opportunity to tak. He has spoken at least once on almost every direction that has arisen in the locate this account, and on some subjects he has not been content with less than two or three speeches. He and Senator Call are the subjection many ally joke by their colleagues on out of order, as up the not think he had speaks of long.

With a grim smile the cunning Mr. Ingalls deliberately held up a sand glass which always stands upon the President's desk when the five-minute rule is in operation, and safe:
"The Chair is governed by this glass."

Then Mr. Jones smiled and sat down, and everybody wondered at Mr. Ingalls.

The President to-day returned to the House without his approval five private pension bills. The first two, granting pensions to Stephen A. Searey and Sarah A. Corson, were veloed upon the ground that the disabilities for which pension is sought had no connection with the military service of the soldier. The act granting a pension to Manuel Carcia is disapproved for want of evidence showing that any disability exists. The act granting a pension to Mrs. Anna Butterfield is vetoed for want of satisfactory evidence that the soldier was in the Government service when killed by an explosion, as claimed. The lith bill vetoed granted a pension to Eliza Smith, the widow of a Second Lieutenant in an Indiana regiment. Smith died in 1854 at a hotel in Union Chy, ind., and it was determined at the time, the President says, that his death resulted from an overdoed of morphine, self-administered. The President adds that it would establish a very bad precedent to allow a pension upon the facts developed in this case. The first two granting pensions to Stephen A.

Senator Sherman has sent a circular note to Senator Sherman has sent a circular note to Republican Senators asking each if there are any measures pending before the Senate in which he is especially interested, and upon which he desires action by the Senate during the seasion. They are requested to reply to the committee on the order of business. It is understood to be the intention of the committee to provide for clearing the calendar of important business before the Tariff bill is brought in.

Senator Palmer to-day introduced a bill appropriating $350,000 for the purchase by the United States of the Portage Lake and River Improvement Company Caual, and the Lake Superior Ship Canal, Rallway and Iron Company Canal in Michigan.

Eight journeymen batters, representing 12,000 workers of their craft in five different States, appeared before the Senate tariff subcommittee to-day, and made a strong appeal for protection against what they claim to be misinterpretation or maladministration of the present tariff law. They represent that by reason of the action of the authorities, hats, which are absolutely finished, with the exception, perhaps, of the band, the binding, or the lining—hats upon which all the work of their craft has been done—are admitted as unlinished goods at 20 per cent, ad valorem. The undervaluations constantly practised, together with the low rate of duty, they declare, are destroying their means of livelihood. This year, they say, fully one-half the hats necessary to supply the market will be imported, with a corresponding reduction of the aggregate income of the working hatters. Silk, which bears an ad valorem duty of 50 per cent, these men represent, comes in by the million yards, under the rulings of the department, at 20 per cent, as trimmings. Among the papers pre-ented was a petition said to bear the signature of every journeyman hatter of Bethel, Conn., 540 in number, irrespective of party, asking for protection. 12,000 workers of their craft in five different

Since the nomination of Gen. Harrison there have been many requests from Democratic Senators and politicians all over the country for his correct record while in Congress upon public questions, particularly that of Chinese immigration. These inquiries come in thick and fast now as the campaign opens. The bulk of them are addressed to the superintendent of the document room in the Senators and House. To satisfy the demands of Senators an employee of the Senate has prepared an accurate statement of every vote given by Gen. Harrison on questions that came up during his six years in the Senate. The data is compiled from the Congressional records, and the volume and page upon which each vote is to be found is set down in the margin. A Democratic Senator borrowed this compilation recently, and on looking it over was annoyed to find attached to his copy, which of course was a private one, a newspaper article, also prepared by a Senator official, commenting upon the record of Gen. Harrison, as shown in the compilation and drawing the conclusion that the charge of friendliness to the Chinese could not be proved against the Republican candidate. The Senator said he did not think any senate employee had the right to prepare such a defence of a public man, and at the same time disagreed with his conclusions. The Sonator thinks that the record shows Harrison to have been opposed to the anti-Chinese legislation. Senators and politicians all over the country

POLITICAL UNION WITH CANADA

What Sir John Macdonald's Orean Says o

OTTAWA, Aug. 9 .- The Intelligencer, owned ard controlled by the Hon. McKenzie Bomel, Minister of Customs, and which is the mouthpiece of Sir John Macdonald's Cabinet, in commenting on Senator Blair's resolution for the negotiation of political union between Canada and the United States, says:

"Our neighbors have in the past tried coereive measures with a similar end, but without the slightest degree of success. Their latest threat will be equally vain. We desire to live in peace and amity with them, and to trade with them on terms which are mutually advantageous. To accomplish this end we have at all times pursued a conclinatory course, but we will not unite with them politically or even commercially. We have a noble heritage, which is being rapidly developed by a liberal use of our own neans, and nature has given us advantages which we fully realize and are utilizing to the benefit of the trade of the continent. To give up the one to a foreign power which has in vain attempted to conquer it, or to forego the other would be treason, and there are but few traitors in Canada. Commercial warfare with the United States would be unpleasant and unprolitable to both countries, and Canada will no inaugurate it. There will be no other kind of war between the Dominion and the Republic, which, in spite of any temporary disagreement as to commercial affairs, will continue their separate political existence." advantageous. To accomplish this end we their weakness for talking. Senator Stewart and made one speech to-day and addressed the Chair for the second time.

"The Senator from Nevada has spoken once on the bill." said Mr. Ingalls, in his most cutting, deliberate, and cold-blooded tones.

"Inst want to ask—" stammered the big Nevada senator.

"The Chair cannot recognize the Senator again." replied the presiding officer, almost curtiv.

Mr. Stewart end down rather sheepishly, while the Senators smiled, and then Mr. Jones renewed the attack. Quick as a flash Ingalis turned on him.

"The Senator from Arkansas has already specken live minutes." said he.

"Mr. Jenes quite inflitly suggested that the Kansas Senator's timepisce might be a little out of order, as he did not think he had spoken so long.

As the train slowed into the station, eight Sergeants of the Third Artillery, under command of Lieut. Danes, marched up the platform and formed in line. Soon after the train stopped Mrs. Sheridan stepped out, leaning on the arm of Col. Sheridan. They were met by Gen. Rucker and Miss R oker, Mrs. Sheridan's father and sister. They immediately entered their carriage, and were rapidly driven away. Mrs. Sheridan was evidently deeply moved. As they left the station the artillery Sergeants took the casket from the car, and bore it to a gun caisson be-longing to the Third Artillery, which was draped with flags festooned with crape. As the calsson bearing the body left the station, Troop B of the Fourth Cavairy fell into line in front, and escorted the procession up Pennsylvania avenue to Filteenth street and to St. Matthew's Church. Following the caisson in carriages were Gen. Schoffeld and staff. Dr. O'Kellly, Col. Blunt, and the guard of honor from the local commander yof the Loyal Legion. As the body reacted the church door it was met by a procession of the clergy and the sanctuary boys singing the "Miserers." After the casket had been placed upon the catalalque the preliminary burial service was recited, the choir singing a funeral hymn. The interior of the church was effectively draped, the feature of the decerations being the American colors blended with heavy folds of craps. The ironts of both gallories were covered with large flags caught up at intervals with broad bands of black. Above the entrance on the front of the organ loft were grouped regime tal and cavairy flags, fastened together by a knot of black with black streamers. The altar was heavily draped. The candelabra and the marble figures on either side were draped with black. Two silk American flags hung from the wall above the altar. The Cardinal's throne on the left of the altar was appropriately covered, and the front of the pulpit was concealed by heavy black telvet with deep silver fringe. A space had been made in front of the altar by the removal of four pews on either side of the main aisle. In the centre of which stands the cardialque, the same that was used in the funeral services held in this church on the death of king Alfonso several years ago. It is about four fact high, and rests upon a broad lasse, which is covered with the national colors bordered with a hand of black velvet, The upper portion is festooned with black. The steamboat Maryland, with her colors at half-mast, arrived at the Jersey City slip of the Pennsylvania Railroad at 7½ yesterday morning, and the Inneral train was at once drawn on to the land. Palace car No. 60 was occupied by Mrs. Sheridan. Behind this was the car in which lay the remains of the dead hero. The Pullman car, in which was the escort of officers, and the Idlewild, in which President Cleveland made his last journey to Washington, and which was now occupied by the renorters, were the last two cars of the train to land. Very few succetators were present. Col. Michael V. Sheridan, with bowed hend, stood on the wharf while the car which contained the casket was being taken from the Maryland. The Pennsylvania company had a combination car draped in mourning, and with heavy carpets on the floor, in remainess for the remains, as it was thought that the Old Colony car, which brought the remains to Jersey City, might be dangerous to run it over the Pennsylvania rails. TRYING HARD TO SAFE LYONR. Mis Counsel Attack the Law and Question the Recorder's Jurisdiction.

Yesterday afternoon Judge Patterson of the Supreme Court, after listening to an informal discussion by Assistant District Attorney Goff, Lawyer Blake, Under Sheriff Sexton, and William H. Clark, the Sheriff's counsel, granted a writ of habeas corous and an order to show cause in the case of Dan Lyons, the condemned murderer. The order requires the District Attorney and the Sheriff to show cause on Monday next why the execution of sentence should not be stayed until argument can be heard upon an appeal from the original judgment. Upon this appeal it is intended to rai-a the constitutional question as to the le-gality of the act of the Legislature which deprived the prisoner of the right to appeal to the General Term of the Supreme Court, and com-

IT IS MR. ELSEY'S OWN CHURCH. The Faith Cure War Ends in the Rout of the Anti-Elseyites. The seceders from the congregation of the Elsey Memorial Faith Cure Chapel, on Jewitt avenue, Jersey City, who left the church because Mrs. Elsey, the wife of the proprietor. dismissed the pastor, the Rev. William Albert Phillips, who preached large bunches of truth with an occasional dub of faith cure instead of vice versa, have been deserted by their leader. and in consequence have given up the idea of establishing an opposition church. Mr. Phillips a short time ago received a call from a church in Philadelphia, and yesterday he signified his intention of accepting it. He will be tendered a reception this evening at the residence of Col. Seage, at 15 Brinkerhoff street. Jersey City Heights. Mr. Seage is the leader of the secessionists a majority of whom, it is said, will give up the faith cure religion and return to the churches to which they belonged before the Elsey Mission was established. One reason for this, it is said, is that Mr. Elsey, the founder and proprietor of the Mission, has expressed a desire that they should keep away from the Mission. It is said that on Friday night last one of the women who left the church with Mr. Phillips was about to enter the mission, where a meeting was in progress, when she was met at the door by Mr. Elsey, who is alleged to have said: "I wish you and your family would keep away from here. We do not want you." establishing an opposition church. Mr. Phillips

THURSDAY, Aug. 9. The speculation in American securities in London was, contrary to the expectation of some, unaffected by the advance in the Bank of England rate of discount. This was possibly due to the smallness of the advance. To-morrow is fortnightly settlement day on the London Stock Exchange, but the fact that a little better rates are demanded for carrying securities does not seem to have influenced any selling to speak of. As a matter of fact the buying for foreign account to-day, both here and in London, appeared to be as extensive as usual.

London, appeared to be as extensive as usual.

cases, any accumulation of stocks which are being held for higher prices. The peculiarity of the present movement has been that neither pools nor large orderators have been conspicuous in it, the strength of the market being due to foreign buying and a marked increase in the scattering domestic orders. Of course it is possible that the purchases for London are the result of some sort of a combination formed there. The transactions were unusually well distributed and the movement of prices quite uniform. The principal exception was Jersey Central, which was unusually active at a sharp advance in consequence of the developments noted in this column this morning. The specialities also held their own, Lake Eric and Western preferred being particularly active and higher. There was fresh activity in Colorado Coal, but a little less was done in some of the others that have been conspicuous recently. None of the net declines were important. The largest were those of he went, in St. Paul common and Lake Shore.

The most important news was of the efforts which were begun yesterday for a harmonious adjustment of the differences between the Union and Northern Pacific companies. As was to be expected. Mr. Villard's return has been promotly followed by a conciliatory conference between these two intercests and though no tangible progress has been made, the fact that the matters in dispute have become the subject of negotiation is encouraging. It is fortunate that the myestment interests in the Northern Pacific and the Oregon Railway and Navigation companies have a representative in the management of the first named who is capable of curbing the avaritous propensities of his unserquences officerors. We have no doubt that in time Mr. Villard will consummate the alliance which he appreciated years ago was deleated by geographical considerations.

The market closed fairly steady, the late dealings being to an extent influenced by the appearance of buyers who have been holding off for some time for a reaction. The only question at the close was whether London, as it has usually of late, would check the reaction at the opening to-morrow or permit it to run a few hours.
